

The Apostles' Creed
I Believe . . .
Romans 10:9-10

We live in a world that categorically rejects the existence of a truth that applies to all human beings, in all places, and throughout all time. We live in a culture that tells us that we can believe whatever we want to believe and live however we want to live. The only invalid belief in our culture is to believe that someone else is wrong.

The Apostles' Creed will help us with:

- _____
- _____
- _____
- _____

1. Salvific belief is stated _____
2. Salvific belief is embraced _____

The message of the Christian faith isn't that we have done anything, but rather that we have believed that Someone else has. This is the primary difference between the gospel and every other religion. We aren't chained to rote religious activity, but we have a Savior who has accomplished all that we desire for us.
