

The Songs of Christmas
Simeon's Song
Luke 2:25-35

Christmas too often can be characterized as a frantic race. We race to get shopping finished. We race to get meals prepped. We race to get cards sent and gifts wrapped. And then in what seems like an instant, it is over. The finish line tape is broken, and we are left with a mess. Is it possible though that in our rush to the finish line, that there still may be one unopened gift left under the tree?

We all have faith. We all trust someone or something to help us process decisions and lead us through life. It might be us. It might be someone close. It might be a theory or philosophy or religion. The heart of the Christmas story is that God was giving Himself to you and to me so that we might embrace Him as our Ruler and rely on Him as our Redeemer. Don't leave the greatest gift of Christmas unopened this year.
